One day, in line at the company cafeteria, Bipin says to Rajesh behind him, "My elbow hurts like hell. I guess I better see a doctor."

"Listen, you don't have to spend that kind of money," Rajesh replies. "There's a diagnostic computer at the drugstore at the corner.

Just give it a urine sample and the computer will tell you what's wrong and what to do about it. It takes ten seconds and costs Ten dollars.... a hell of a lot cheaper than a doctor."

So Bipin deposits a urine sample in a small jar and takes it to the drugstore. He deposits ten dollars, and the computer lights up and asks for the urine sample. He pours the sample into the slot and waits.

Ten seconds later, the computer ejects a printout:

You have tennis elbow.

Soak your arm in warm water and avoid heavy activity.

It will improve in two weeks.

That evening while thinking how amazing this new Technology was, Bipin began wondering if the computer could be fooled. He mixed some tap water, a stool sample from his dog, urine samples from his wife and daughter, and masturbated into the mixture for good measure.

Bipin hurries back to the drugstore the next day, eager to check the results. He deposits ten dollars, pours in his concoction, and awaits the results.

The computer prints the following:

1. Your tap water is too hard. Get a water softener.
2. Your dog has ringworm. Bathe him with anti-fungal shampoo.
3. Your daughter has a cocaine habit. Get her into rehab.
4. Your wife is pregnant.....twin girls. They aren't yours. Get a lawyer.
5. If you don't stop playing with yourself, your elbow will never get better.
